Belém: An Alternative City

Belém is original and creative, modern and ancestral. There's the city that appears on postcards, but also the one made of traditions — of those who live and breathe the northern spirit, who work and produce here from the beginning. In the downtown area, in the peripheries, in the river regions, in informal commerce, where you can find restaurants with authentic local cuisine, stores with products made from regional resources, coming from the forest and local knowledge. Be welcomed by the charm it reveals. The original Belém, shaped by the genuine warmth that only an authentic life can offer.

@FERNANDOSETTE

The Papa Xibé Guide proposes to take you to discover this city where the people, the food, the handcrafts, and the curiosities are not immediately visible, but are well worth the visit and delight of those coming to Belém for the first time.

Rest assured, this guide was prepared by people who live and breathe the city. And this is the Belém you will enjoy!

papa xibé

A typical expression from Pará state that refers to xibé (or chibé), a dish made with cassava flour. The term is used to define an authentic person born in Pará (called paraense), who has cassava flour as the base of their diet.

For those who just arrived

For visitors from other countries, the Papa Xibé Guide makes some basic but always valid recommendations:

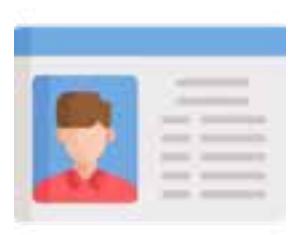

Yellow fever vaccination is recommended at least 15 days before traveling.

Exchange some money before leaving the airport. In Brazil, PIX is widely used. It's a quick and very efficient payment method; however, it requires a national bank account to use it.

Almost all establishments accept credit cards, but it's always good to have cash to avoid bigger problems.

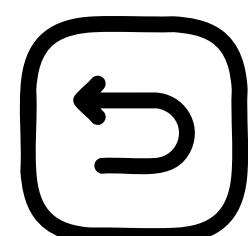

Always keep digital copies of original documents. If your passport is lost, contact the Federal Police (Polícia Federal) (@pf.para / \(91\) 32148000), file a report and only then contact the consulate, embassy or representation of your country.

More information about consulates and embassies in the "Services"

Take an ID document, some money for food, transportation and maybe an extra expense, and pay attention to personal belongings: cellphones, for example; use comfortable shoes; don't accept drinks or food from strangers, share your location with close friends and check if there are lockers or a place to safely leave your heavy belongings.

The climate in Belém is tropical humid, which means the heat is intense and humidity can exceed 80%. Stay hydrated! Always have filtered or bottled water.

November is a month when the rain is quite frequent, make sure to have a light raincoat or umbrella so you won't miss the tour. Whenever possible, prefer light clothing made with natural fabrics.

The use of sunscreen is essential, even on cloudy days.

Repellent should always be at hand, especially in the late afternoon.

Social and cultural interaction is based on mutual respect; ask permission to photograph people at any events, and be mindful in crowded spaces, especially in areas without visible security.

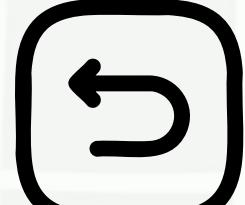

Value the economy and buy local products; have empathy for differences, no to prejudice!

People's Summit Territory

(CÚPULA DOS POVOS)

The Federal University of Pará (UFPA), the largest public university in the Amazon, will host the People's Summit at COP30, with an intense agenda of events, lectures, debates and socio-environmental discussions. Located in the Guamá neighborhood, on the shores of Guajará Bay, UFPA receives over 60 thousand people daily and will be the home of organized social movements during COP.

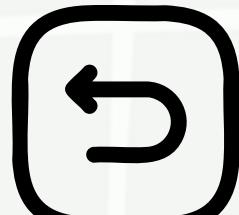

The distance between Belém's Airport and UFPA is 13.8 km.

ASCOM / UFPA

Getting around Guamá, Belém's most populous neighborhood, may be easier if you already have some familiarity with the city. Several bus lines serve the neighborhood and it's possible to find, near UFPA, supermarkets, services and small shops.

City Park

(PARQUE DA CIDADE)

Belém, The City Park, in the Val-de-Cans neighborhood (west zone of Belém), in an area of 500 thousand m², will be the venue for the Blue Zone, an area for political-diplomatic negotiations, with 160 thousand m² of offices and pavilions for delegations from UN member countries; and the Green Zone, an open space for society and institutions, a showcase of solutions and experiences on actions, addressing topics about climate financing and biodiversity.

The distance between Belém's Airport and the City Park is 4 km.

Nearby neighborhoods offer a variety of accommodation, restaurants and bars, as well as fairs, pharmacies and services.

Belém Mairí: welcoming and diversity

Belém do Pará, city of mango trees and northern charms, is also Belém “Mairí”, recognized as the city of Mahyra, a native woman who, in Nheengatu language and tradition, taught us about agriculture and harvesting. So, this is the city that welcomes you, a warm and affectionate place where rain arrives suddenly to refresh you, bringing a gentle breeze with the scent of the forest.

Then comes the food, just as you begin to feel hungry, and in Belém, the food truly stands out: rich, abundant, and full of flavor, a cuisine shaped by the river, the sea, and the fresh ocean breeze.

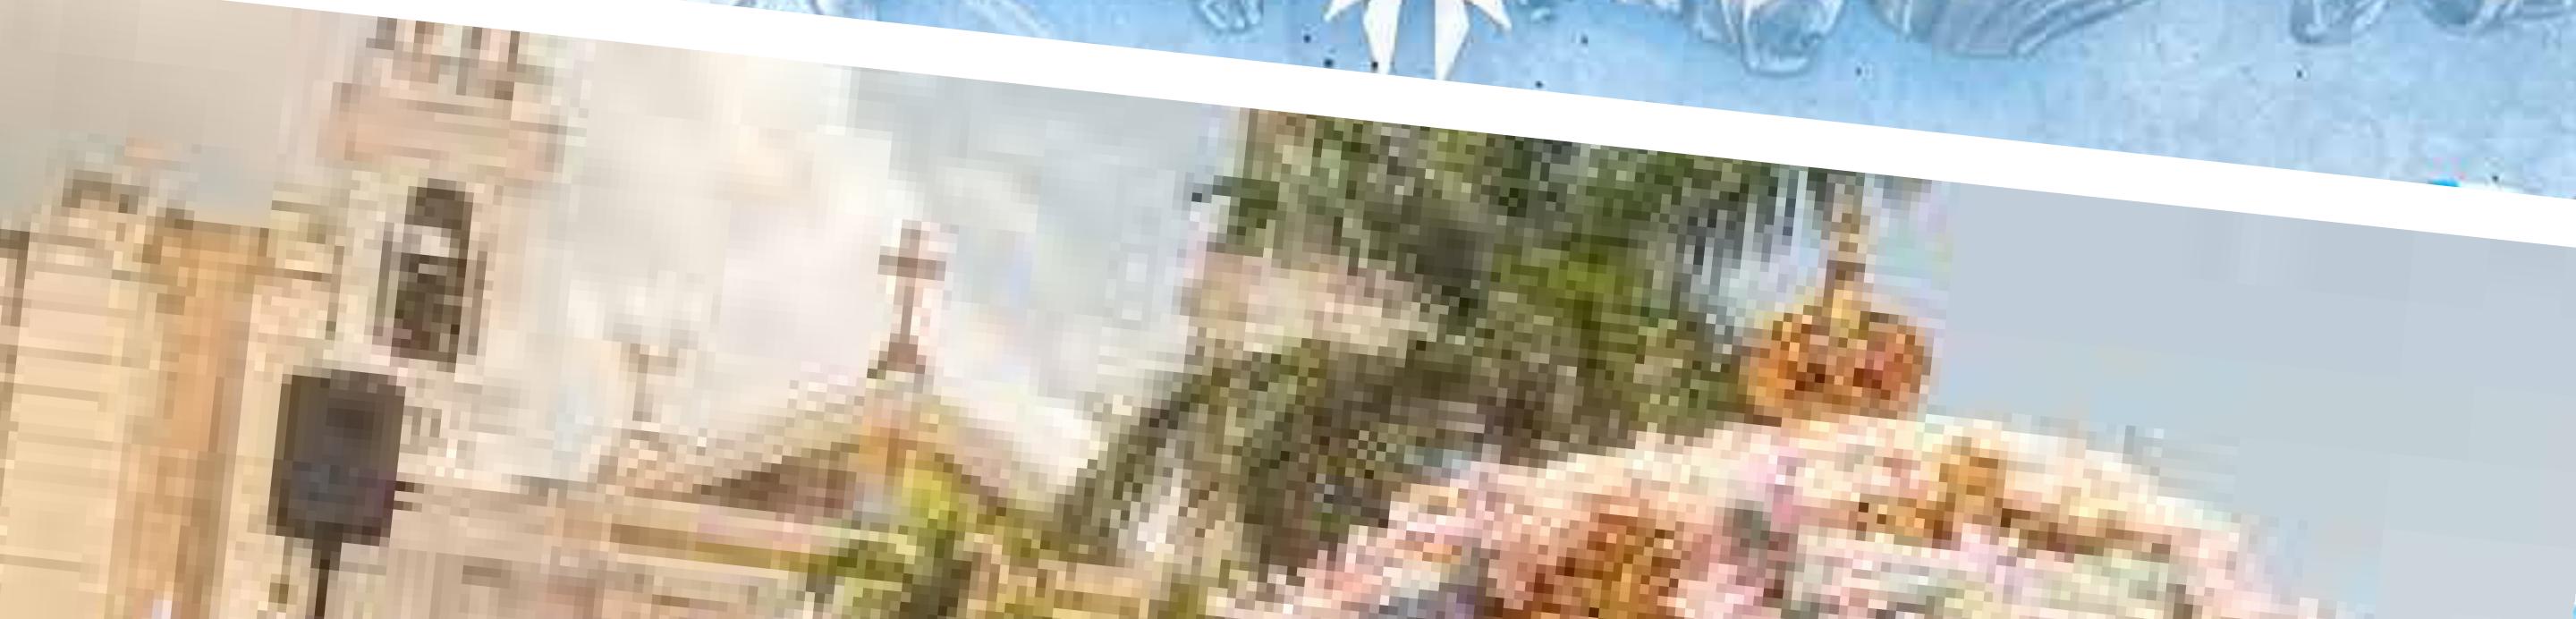

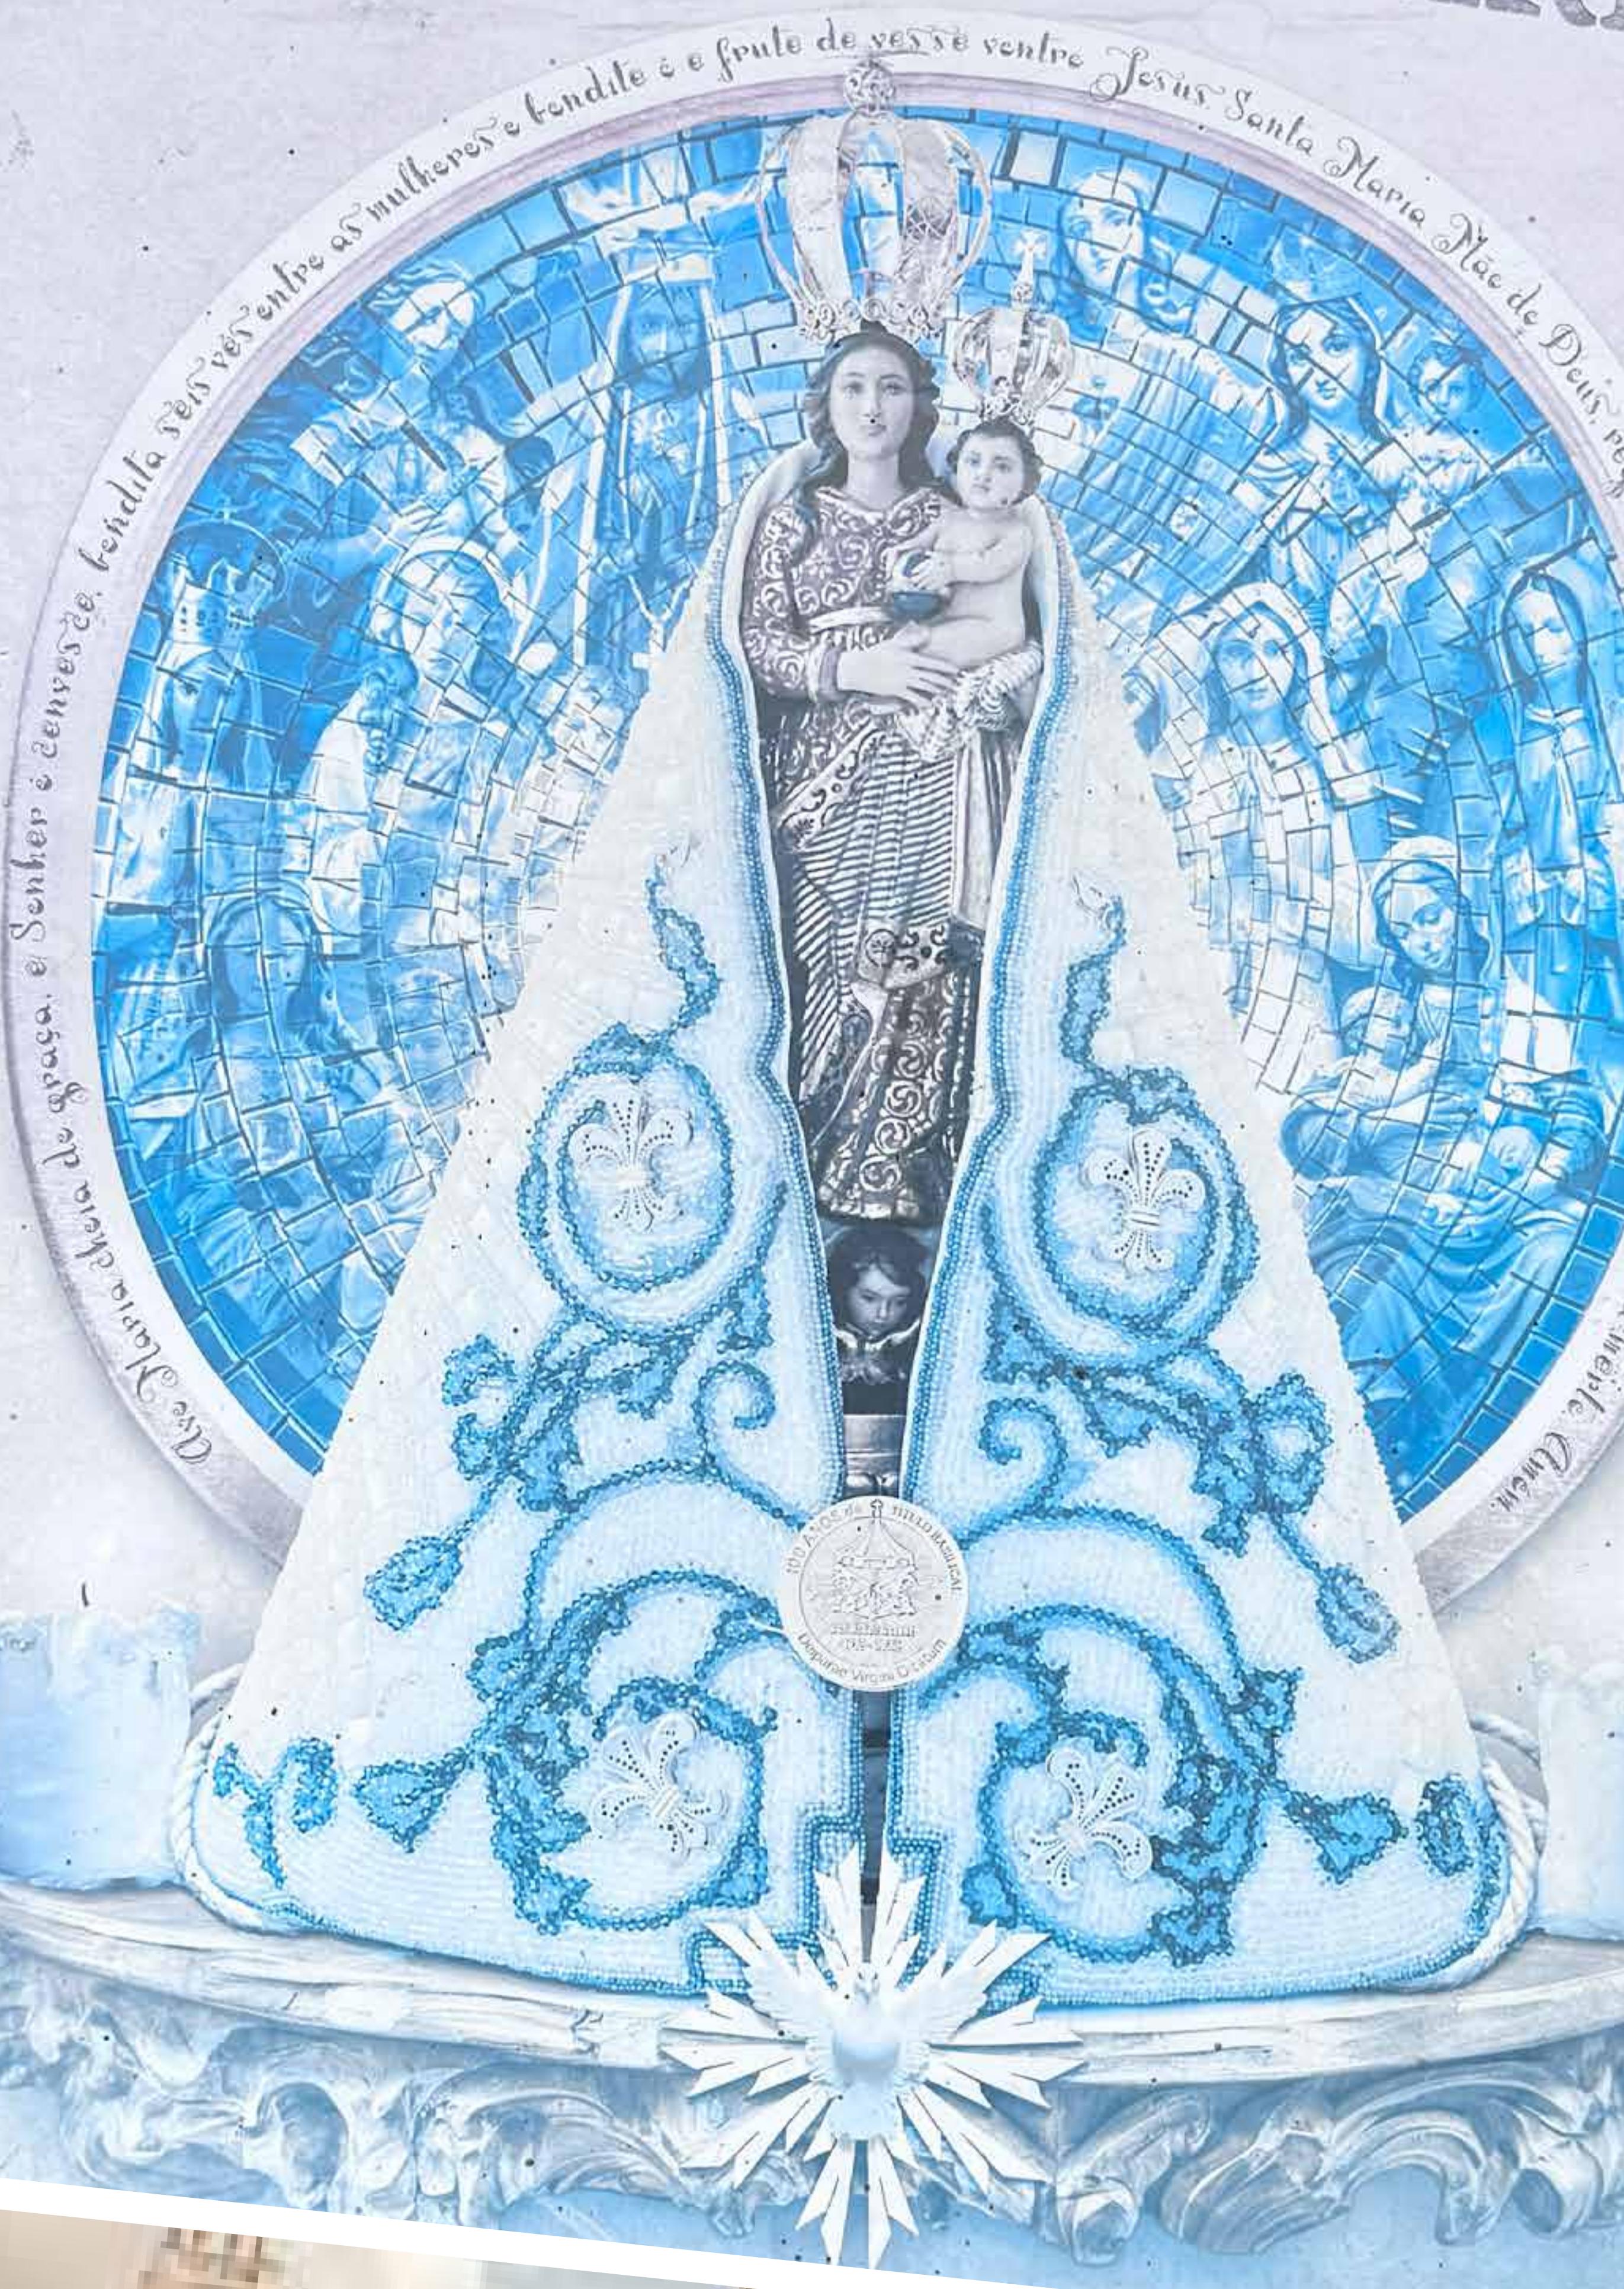

Belém Mairi welcomes you with a cultural immersion filled with diversity, identity and creativity flowing through its canals, tree-lined streets, and echoes of Portuguese heritage. But above all, through the culture of its land and waters - shaped by riverside traditions and by Black, Indigenous and traditional communities, rooted in ancestral knowledge that pulses at the heart of this vibrant, mixed city.

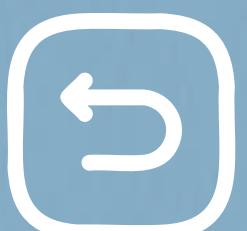

éguia

This typical expression from Pará is used in many different ways – it is good for just about everything. It can be used to express surprise, admiration, shock or even indignation. Something like “wow!” or “damn!”, but with a touch of the personality and accent of the paraenses.

CÍRIO DE NAZARÉ

Círio: faith in celebration

In Belém, there is the largest Catholic procession in the world, the Círio, always on the second Sunday of October, which brings together over 2 million people, bringing graces, promises, strengthened faith and belief, in praise of the city's patron saint, Mary of Nazareth (Maria, Nossa Senhora de Nazaré). You must see, participate, and accompany this as well as all processions in praise of Mary. Among so many curiosities, there is the religious celebration with all its rituals, but there are also the profane parties, from the common and simple people, the night people, artists. The Auto do Círio - a theatrical and fervent performance, in the open air - and the Chiquita party, which celebrates the LGBTQIA+ life of the city.

Brega

Musical genre that emerged in the 60's, to dance very close to one another. At sound system culture parties (Aparelhagens), the audience trembles – literally! - to the sound of "tecnobrega".

CROCODILO / DISCLOSURE

Belém: from sound system culture parties to the streets

Got some extra time to move your body?

There are parties of all kinds and for all tastes; of all colors, flags and tribes, traditional and modern parties, to dance close together or to tremble, paid or free. We have parties to the sound of lambada, brega, all local and universal rhythms, guitarradas, carimbó dance gatherings, drumming at the Açaí Fair, sound system culture parties, as well as intimate ones, to listen to soft music. Belém guarantees fun, entertainment and art at all times.

@COISASDENEGROOFICIAL

Carimbó

Word from the Tupí language (Korimbó), which means "stick that produces sound". It has been considered Intangible Heritage of Brazil since 2014.

tacacá

This is Tacacá! Served in a gourd bowl, you drink the cassava broth, the tucupi, and inside it, there are shrimps, jambu leaves that numbs the mouth, and a gum made from the same plant as the broth. Does it seem strange to you? Ah... very hot, right? Delicious!

maniçoba

By any chance, have you eaten something that doesn't look pretty? This is Maniçoba, made from cassava; its mashed leaves form a moss-green base for beef and pork cuts. You eat it with white rice and cassava flour, it's like an indigenous feijoada. I guarantee you a gastronomic feast!

brocado

To be very hungry, famished, starving. Popular slang from Pará disseminated in the North of Brazil that exaggerates the sense of wanting to eat. "I'm brocado", say the people of Belém.

Belém: eat at the tide floor...

In Belém, food is a delight of flavors. There are regional dishes that will give you great pleasure and there is, above all, the açaí, which is in the people's blood and is consumed sweet, pure, with food, and there's much more... In the city, there are places where you can spend a lot, but others where you eat the best quality at good prices. So, let's eat at the restaurant, at the stall, at the fair, at the riverside or river creek, at the beach, at the street food restaurant, at the daily special. But, at least at first, remember, dig in with moderation to enjoy it to the fullest.

Thirsty?

Tap water in Belém is not safe to drink. Drink only filtered or bottled water.

Belém and a bit beyond

Ah, got a few free days on your agenda? How about visiting a place with a freshwater beach? Go to Mosqueiro, a river island right in Marajó Bay; or you can cross the river and discover the beaches of Cotijuba, an environmental protection area; you can also visit Ilha das Onças or take a tour just over there at Ilha do Combu. There's also Utinga Park, a very favorable area for physical and leisure activities. If you want to discover the charms of ceramics, go to Icoaraci, a charming district. But, if you have a little more time, there are the cities of Soure and Salvaterra, on Marajó Island, it's pure history, and you can ride a buffalo and walk through pastures, paradise on Earth. In all these places there are hotels, restaurants, comfort, and adventure, for you to have a complete experience.
